his re - turn her heart in vain does yearn, And for their coun - try they would glad - ly die. Each wheth - er he still lives no one can tell. But sol - dier has a sweet-heart, Who brave - ly bids him go, And in her hours of dream-ing, She lives a - gain that day, He when the last good-byes are said, He whis-pers soft and low:
kissed her good - bye, and once more She seems to hear him say:

CHORUS
When the war is o - ver sweet - - - heart,
When the can - nons cease their roar,
I'll come back a - gain to you, dear,
As in the days of yore.

Once more in my arms I'll hold you,
To the par-son's we'll then fly, Good - bye dear, for me you need not fear, I will
